What will sessions cover?
Session topics will include and expand upon effective leadership, innovation, crisis leadership, collaboration and mergers and more.

Why is the Community Foundation offering these sessions?
If COVID-19 has taught us anything, it's that when the hard work needs to happen we come together and make it happen because the people who call our region home are counting on us. The collaborations formed throughout our region to combat COVID-19 are inspiring, thought provoking and should lead us all to ask, "What's next?" That's why we're offering seven high level, thought provoking sessions, taught by key leaders in the nonprofit industry. Our hope is that nonprofit staff, board members and even key stakeholders to local nonprofits will attend. The cost is reasonable and our hope is that this time together virtually will lead to further conversations that ultimately provide even greater impact in our region.

These sessions are also geared toward nonprofits self-care and will provide the opportunity for nonprofit organizations to challenge themselves and have space for creativity and innovation to allow the good things we've experienced during COVID-19 to continue. And that's why we're offering this exciting opportunity with top-notch faculty at a very reasonable price to make it as accessible as possible.
